This sprint has been quite short due to the Easter holiday, so I think that during this time I have set realistic goals for both me and the team. We have gotten started and have a good basic for the project to proceed.

I feel like my contribution towards the team has been to engage in product decisions and making sure we agree on decisions regarding the group such as meetings. I also have been the one having contact with TA and teachers.

To the next sprint, my main focus is to get started with the project and learn more about the library we using since it is designed for game development, but I also like to learn about everyone in the teams' skills so that we can benefit from each other. I feel excited to get started and once we get the work going, I think we get a clear picture of what we are capable of accomplishing.
