This sprint has passed really quickly, since it only consisted of 3 working days. We realized this and did set reasonable goals to what to achieve in this short period.

My focus right now is understanding my role in the group and figure out what my areas of expertise are and followingly what I can contribute with. This sprint I have tried to develop and refine our project scope and drafted a list of "need to have" features and "nice to have" features, to better divide and conquer our building blocks.

Next sprint I would like to better understand how time-consuming different tasks are and deepen my knowledge about our group's overall knowledge and expertise. Through better communication I can help my team with this.