Individual Reflection – Thea

This week I contributed by doing research on UNs webpage to find suitable questions, I discussed with some team members the plan for our question window and how we should develop it and split up the work between us. I started writing the next team reflection and filled in the important gaps together with my team members and compared it with last weeks reflection. We also had several discussions in the entire group to make sure we were at the same page and prioritized the user stories in a reasonable way. The roles and tasks were better distributed this week. We had more work in progress and a clearer plan since last week which probably made it easier to split up the work between us. I still want to learn more about the programming process and building qualitative code.
